The Tree Register

of Britain & Ireland

A unique record of over 230,000 notable and historic trees in these islands

Patron: HRH The Prince of Wales
Charity No.801565

Recording our tree heritage

As many of you will be aware, today so much of our green environment is undervalued, even endangered.

Our trees are a crucial part of that environment and the unique tree heritage of these islands needs to be cherished and nurtured.

By doing its job of gathering and recording information on thousands of the biggest, tallest, most notable, and historic trees, the Tree Register is significantly involved in that conservation process.

Details of no less than 230,000 trees (represented by over 7,500 kinds) are recorded on our database, a massive contribution to creating public awareness of the significance of trees in both our rural and urban environments, from great country estates to street trees in our towns and cities. This is the hub of our work. It finds expression on our website, in our annual newsletters, the books we publish and, most importantly, being able to provide specific information on request.

Champion trees

Only the Tree Register provides the definitive list of where to find the largest and tallest "champion" trees, with over 60,000 trees accessible online, regularly updated.

Look out for our blue champion tree labels

How your subscription will contribute to our work

- Maintain and grow our unique database information resource. It has real scientific and educational value for researchers, writers and journalists, gardeners, botanists, arboriculturists and the public at large. It is available free, or for a voluntary contribution to costs.
- Provide the definitive guide to identifying 60,000 of the largest and tallest 'champion' trees, both nationally and on a county basis.
- Support a nationwide network of dedicated unpaid volunteer tree hunters and recorders who maintain and update this repository of tree knowledge.
- Join constructive partnerships with other groups such as the Woodland Trust and the Ancient Yew Group.
- Support projects across Europe to collaborate with existing, and help create, similar organisations.
- Finance a continuous update of our modern and efficient website, packed with information for the benefit both of subscribers and the public.

....and there are practical benefits for you too

- Gain access to our unique tree database, whether for interesting historical information, or simply to enjoy a day out educating the family about our fattest and tallest trees.
- Receive our annual full colour newsletter recording our work in all the regions, plus e-news updates online.

- Discounts on new Tree Register publications.
- Gain privileged password access to members only areas on the website with special regularly updated pages.
- Seek advice on tree identification from our experts.
- Participate in special events arranged for members and meet fellow enthusiasts.
